

Consortium of International Double Degrees

Creating a World of Possibilities

A double-degree allows a student to earn two official degrees from two universities, usually located in two different countries. Double degrees provide graduates with a competitive advantage in the labour market and allows greater work mobility across countries, making it easier for employers to compare national qualifications.

HISTORY

The CIDDD was created in 2000 by a group of higher education institutions as a non-profit organization in order to adopt and promote the double degree concept within the Business school community. Since then, the organization added members in Europe, Asia and North American and expanded to other technical fields such as engineering.

MISSION

The mission of CIDDD is for its member universities to cooperate together in order to:

- Create new partnerships and new double degree programs
- Ensure quality through self-regulation of standards, in particular, those concerned with double degree programs
- Promote international research in business and related fields
- Enhance student and teacher mobility among member universities
- Be a link between business schools and companies
